

The Montessori School of Bronzeville

Elle Dils | Helen Leach

The Montessori School of Bronzeville seeks to foster community-wide learning and collaboration through implementation of the Montessori curriculum. Independent learning is facilitated through the resource-filled central library that weaves its way through the building and connects individual classrooms with one another. In this way, children are given many choices of which learning environment best suits them. The building itself becomes a learning tool through an honest material palette and structural design; that is, the weaving structure and its components are easily understood by observers.
